20. (Unclassified - LLM) Called Mr. Paul Vassallo, Chief, Congressional Reference Division, Library of Congress, in connection with the 26 May letter from the Library of Congress requesting our input for their report "Where to Get Publications from the Executive Departments." I explained that we did not issue publications of the type for which their report was designed, which he seemed to appreciate and said no further response to their letter is required. Mr. Vassallo said he was compiling a report on the various legislative liaison offices in the Executive Branch and in connection with this I gave him Mr. Maury's name, title and phone number, explaining that similar information was carried in the Congressional Directory and the Congressional Staff Directory.

21. (Unclassified - LLM) Mr. Robert Hull, Department of State, called in connection with a request that had been received from the American Foreign Service Association to increase death and disability benefits resulting from attacks by terrorists overseas, specifically by increasing (a) Federal Employees Group Life Insurance coverage, (b) the Bureau of Employees' Compensation scale for disability, and (c) death benefits with a lump-sum payment of one year's salary. In response to his question, I told him that we did not provide any benefits over and beyond the statutory benefits of the Federal Employees Compensation Act or retirement acts for death or disability cases, and that I personally questioned the wisdom of paying different benefits because of the circumstances surrounding the injury. I told Mr. Hull that he should not mention the Agency and its benefit programs in his reply to the American Foreign Service Association. I raised with [redacted] Office of Personnel, whether we ought to pass on to Mr. Hull any information concerning our insurance programs.

Gentlemen:

The Congressional Reference Division of the Legislative Reference Service is in the process of revising the report "Where to Get Publications from the Executive Departments," a copy of which is enclosed.

We should like to make this as comprehensive a tool as possible, including all those offices whose publications may be of interest to Congressional staffs. We are interested in knowing whether publications can be acquired directly from your office, or through the parent agency.

Since we should like to have this revision available by July 1, we would appreciate receiving your report no later than June 5. Please use the entries in the enclosed compilation as a model for your report and address your revision to Mr. Paul Vassallo, Chief, Congressional Reference Division.

We thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

Sincerely,

Lester S. Jayson
